Hypori Completes $23 Million Series B Financing

Expanding Zero-Trust BYOD Platform for Department of Defense

Austin, TX — Hypori, the leading zero-trust bring-your-own-device (BYOD) platform serving the Department of Defense, today announced the completion of its $23 million Series B financing led by Hale Capital Partners.

Hypori Halo® enables government and enterprise users to securely access sensitive applications and data on personal devices without any data ever touching the device. The platform is being deployed to over 20,000 users across the Army, Army Reserve, and Army National Guard, with growing adoption across additional DoD branches and federal agencies.

As part of the financing, Martin M. Hale Jr. has joined the Hypori Board of Directors. “Hypori’s zero-trust BYOD solution addresses a critical capability gap for the Department of Defense,” said Hale. “The platform’s rapid adoption across the Army demonstrates both its technical superiority and the urgent need for secure mobile access in defense environments.”

The Series B proceeds will fund product development, sales expansion, and support for growing DoD deployment requirements as Hypori Halo becomes the standard for secure mobile access across the defense enterprise.
